once upon a time there was a chef called heston who opened a small restaurant called the fat duck at first he served only simple french classics but gradually as is the way of things the chef s curiosity got the better of him and he began thinking up more unusual dishes such as snail porridge and chocolate wine there was even talk of a meringue that made diners snort plumes of vapour like a dragon word spread and reached the ears of the executives who ran a television channel and they summoned the chef to their glass fortress we command you to create six fantastical feasts they said these must be based on history but you may draw on fairytales and legends the first of its kind cookbook expands the uses of splenda proving that it is versatile enough to be used in many different recipes for all types of meals this book examines and analyses the connections between gastronomy tourism and the media it argues that in the modern world gastronomy is increasingly a major component and driver of tourism and that destinations are using their cuisines and food cultures in marketing to increase their competitive advantage it proposes that these processes are interconnected with film television print and social media the book emphasises the notion of gastronomy as a dynamic concept in particular how it has recently become more widely used and understood throughout the world the volume introduces core concepts and delves more deeply into current trends in gastronomy the forces which shape them and their implications for tourism the book is multidisciplinary and will appeal to researchers in the fields of gastronomy hospitality tourism and media studies this book reconsiders the place of magic at the foundations of modernity through careful close reading of plays spell books philosophical treatises and witch trial narratives andrew moore shows us that magic was ubiquitous in early modern england rather than a decline of magic this study traces a broad cultural fascination with supernatural power in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries poets philosophers jurists and monarchs debated the reality and the morality of magic and by extension the limits of human power in this way early modern english writing about magic was closely related to the scientific and political philosophical writing from the period which was likewise reimagining humanity's relationship to nature moore reads thomas hobbes's leviathan alongside contemporary writing by the notorious witch hunters matthew hopkins and john stearne he reminds us that francis bacon's scientific works were addressed to king james i whose own dæmonologie insists on the reality of witchcraft the fantastical science fiction of margaret cavendish he argues must be understood within a tradition that includes works like christopher marlowe's doctor faustus and the peculiar autobiography of criminal astrologer simon forman by considering these disparate works together moore reveals the centrality of magic to the early modern project
